GLENDALE TEAM TO MEET SAN FERNANDO

First Practice Game of Season to Be Played
Here Friday

When the referee's whistle blows
promptly at 3:30 tomorrow at Moyse field, Glendale high and San Fernando high will charge at each other in the first practice game this season. Coach Hayhurst is confident that he has one of the most formidable squads this season, that Glendale high school has ever seen
and that San Fernando will leave
the field with the short end of the score.

The line-up for tomorrow's game
is not available.

MISTAKEN SIGN CAUSES CRASH

A Chevrolet touring, driven by Mr. Dickson of Glendale and a Ford touring, collided Wednesday night at Eleventh street and Grand view.

A mistaken signal was the cause of the accident. The radiator and wheels of the Ford were badly damaged, although the Chevrolet
escaped with a bent fender.

HI SCHOOL BAND STARTS PRACTICE

The Glendale Union high school
band started practice this week
under the direction of Miss Dora
Gibson, head of the music department of the high school.

The band is composed of over thirty pieces and will play at all
high school functions, including athletic games.

CRESCENTA FIRE IS EXTINGUISHED

A forest fire broke out in Water
canyon just north of Las Crescenta
yesterday morning and for a time threatened that district. However, after untiring work on the part of the residents of that section and others who were taken in, the flames were extinguished. The call for help was made to the Glendale
fire department, who took the matter up immediately with the sheriff's office in Los Angeles.

AUTOMOBILE STOLEN

C. C. Carroll, who is employed at the Standard Oil station on East Broadway, reported to the Glendale
police department that his automobile was stolen from his home last night. The car was standing in the driveway, from which it was pushed by the thieves. Local police are now trying to find the missing automobile.

Eligibles to Be Scaled for Weight at Opening of Semester

TRAINING MADE EASY
Central Athletic League
Now Includes Six
High Schools

There has been a reorganization
of the Central Athletic league,
which is to include six high schools, viz., Covina, Citrus Union
at Azusa, Monrovia, Alhambra,
South Pasadena and Glendale.
Franklin high, which was in the league last year, is now a member of the Los Angeles City league.

At a meeting held Tuesday afternoon at South Pasadena, Ben S.
Millikan of Covina was elected president of the league, John E.
Alman of South Pasadena, vice president, and Normal Hayhurst of Glendale, re-elected secretary-treasurer.

William H. Feeler, head coach at Monrovia, was elected football manager for the coming year. It will be his duty to look after football matters, but more especially to secure officials for the Central games.

The season this year will be shorter than last season because
the league is reduced to six schools, the season ending in five weeks. It will begin Friday, October 20, and end Friday, November 17. The general agreement reached was that games shall be called at 4 o'clock and end not later than ten minutes after sundown.

Football prospects are good in all the schools but the coaches who attended the meeting were all reticent about what they expected their teams to do.

The schedule for lightweight teams will be continued, three classes being made, viz., 110-
pound, 130-pound and unlimited.

In the lightweight games teams will be matched the same as in the unlimited. The games will be played the same week but on Tuesdays instead of Fridays, but the place of playing will be reversed.

The state department of physical education is recommending for adoption throughout the state a new plan of classifying boys on the basis of weight. It takes into account the average weight, height and credits in the school. In the case of a boy of 13 or 14 it will allow a certain number of points
based on his age, his height and weight, his year in the school as senior or junior, and he will be classified according to the sum of the points for those four considerations. This, it is believed, will give a better chance for competition among the younger and lighter
boys. Heretofore the lightweight senior has often secured his place
on the lightweight team on the basis of his weight only. Now the extra points to be secured through his rank as a senior against a freshman rank would probably classify him in the 130-pound class
or the unlimited.

Under this plan each boy will be weighed during the first two weeks
of school and this weight, certified
by the principal, becomes his official record for the semester. This will be helpful because it establishes the weight of the boy for the season and does away with the tendency to train down too much to reduce weight in order to maintain a position on the team.

The principals who attended the league meeting were favorably impressed by the plan and it will probably be tried out in all of the schools in the league.

YOUR OWN NEWSPAPER

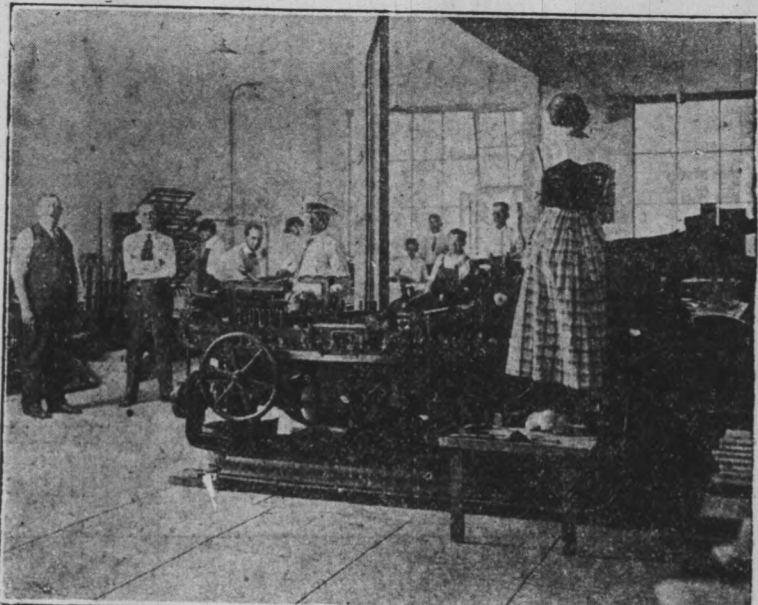

With the circulation of the Glendale Daily Press, the Eagle Rock Daily Press and the Burbank Daily Press reaching toward a total of 6000 daily, and sometimes exceeding that figure, it seems opportune to tell you, who read the papers, subscribe for them, advertise in them, something of what you have put over in this district, in less than two years. In fact in just a year and six months.

YOU did this. The management of the three newspapers serving this district feel their responsibility to you keenly. For that reason the management feels impelled to restrain itself and to express you. For this is not a personally conducted newspaper. It is a community venture in self expression. As such it can go no further in any one direction than the majority of YOU desire. It cannot stop before you dictate.

You have given to the Glendale Press, the parent of your three newspapers, a growth unprecedented in Glendale or anywhere else.

Think of this—
A year ago last March the Glendale Daily Press was first brought out as a daily newspaper. It was born in a field long occupied. Naturally its circulation was limited.

THE GLENDALE PRESS EIGHTEEN MONTHS AGO

The picture shows the original press and the staff of the newspaper. Since this was operated an eight-page press was installed. A sixteen-page press is on the way to Glendale.

At the end of the first six months there were about 1200 of you subscribing and aligned firmly with the struggling sheet. They believed in it.

At the end of eight months the 1200 had reached 3000 subscribers, an endorsement of the present management beyond question.

The winter came with its great expansion. Subscription became general. The first few editorial expressions were welcomed by you all. They were not hastily formed judgments thrown onto the white paper—because the space was not otherwise occupied.

They were what the management thought you wanted it to say. The management was right. These editorials did express you. You said so over the telephone. And in the office.

It is very easy to swing a nasty typewriter in editorial formation. Simple to destroy. But—you did not want to destroy the management thought. It believed you had invested your money in advertising in the Glendale Daily Press, and you had subscribed for it because you wanted to help Glendale, help your other investments here—and your name is all Glendale.

Sometimes, frankly, the management, personally,
may not think as you do. But its duty to you is unchanged.

Before the first twelve months of existence closed,
the circulation of the Glendale Daily Press exceeded
anything ever known in Glendale.

Along during the summer Burbank, through some of its officials, wanted a publication like yours here.

It has made as good success, in the comparatively narrower field as your publication in Glendale. The Burbank readers among you of course preferred their own newspaper. It is not as big as your Glendale Daily Press.

Eagle Rock decided it would like to have a daily.
It, too, wanted a newspaper like the Glendale Press,
one that would express that community, have an editorial column, be susceptible to the demands and wishes
of the public of Eagle Rock.

Your third venture in publishing followed. The Eagle Rock Press is a bright and clever newspaper with a great potential future. It means something in the life of Eagle Rock.

Of course your Glendale stores are advertised in that newspaper.

So this is what you have done in about eighteen months; you started and made a success of one local newspaper, you financed and gave to two sister cities,
local dailies of their own; you have supplied a medium
for the distribution of Glendale advertising through the sister cities of the Verdugo hills. You have united all three communities through the interchange of news of the three communities.

You have three editorial columns wherein your views are reflected as you wish them reflected. And all three editorial columns are living, fighting in the public interest.

There has been no great financial resource behind these publications. You have financed them all, with Glendale money.

From a staff both editorial, business and mechanical
that numbered less than twenty you have more than 50
on your payroll here. And the payroll is growing.

You know and the management knows these newspapers do not fulfill your ideas completely. That will come. Every day means something done which makes your newspapers better publications. None of them reflect completely their communities. It would take a big city newspaper to do that. But for the amount you have invested they are accurate if miniature reflections.

Your newspapers have more influence on things
local in the three communities than any other newspaper
in the area. When your newspapers express your sentiments in the editorial columns, they are listened to with respect. For it is you, you who pay the taxes and conduct the business of the community are talking and you will always have an audience.

EVENING HI SUCCESS IS INDICATED

Record Breaking Enrollment and Attendance
Is Shown Already

COURSES FORMING
School Which Opened
Last Year Closed With
Total of 667

From the number of inquiries as to the time of opening the evening
school there will be a record breaking enrollment and attendance in the evening school this year. The work of last year was so successful
and the courses offered of such a wide scope and satisfactory nature
that during all of this week the telephone at the high school has been kept busy answering inquiries concerning the work of the coming year. At a meeting of the Board of Education all of the courses offered
last year were decided on favorably
and they will be offered again this year. As far as possible new courses will be offered. These courses will depend upon the number asking for them and the ability to furnish equipment and teachers to supply the demand. A study of the statistics concerning last year's work shows some very interesting facts.

From the financial side the result
has been more than satisfactory.
The amount paid out for teacher's salaries for the evening school
amounted to $4156 and the amount apportioned by the state and county to the school this year based on
the attendance of last year is $4900,
showing a return of approximately $750 more than was expended for the extra amount of running expenses and materials the evening
school would be paying its own expenses without the necessity of levying an district tax for the operation of the school. This amount is based entirely on the average attendance which shows the popularity of the evening work, as well as
so that the attendance in any of them did not fall low enough to cut down the average. This record is very exceptional for the first year
of the work, for many schools in their first year and even after they have been well established, have trouble in keeping the attendance
up to a point where the apportionment will meet expenses. In many of the classes it was found necessary to form a waiting list and in all probability this will be again
necessary where the equipment is limited.

The total enrollment last year
was 667, divided about equally between men and women. The following is a list of the total enrollment for the different classes:
Men's gymnasium 110, women's gymnasium 106, Spanish 90, typing 68, English 58, millinery 59, bookkeeping 59, mechanical 45, arith-
motic 43, shorthand 45, auto-
shop 28, machine shop 20.

A great many were enrolled last year in the commercial work with the idea of improving their ability
in these lines. The shorthand courses were very popular. Large as well as typewriting. Bookkeeping and penmanship ran to capacity all through the year. The mechanical lines of work including machine
shop, auto shop, woodwork and carpentry, and mechanical drawing
taxed the capacity of the equipment
all through the year and will again be offered. As is shown by the number enrolled, the gymnasium
courses were extremely popular.

There is a growing demand for a period of relaxation and the central location of the school plant made
the gymnasiums one of the popular places at all times.

In the men's gymnasium work
there were two classes, the young men's class in which there were organized several basketball teams.
The regular team representing the evening school entered the A. A. U.
tournament last year and finished
the season in third place in the play-offs of the Southern California
A. A. U. series. It is expected that there will be an even more successful season this year and with as many as six different teams last year, there should be as many or more this season, and it is planned to have a regular home tournament and arrangements are under way to provide competition with other organizations in different towns to provide outside competition. The excellent floor and adequate showers are a great inducement to enter into this great indoor game. The business men did not go into such strenuous sport but were taken up with volleyball and indoor baseball. Outside competition will be provided for these classes after they get into good practice.

The women's gymnasium class
was a great success. The demand for this work was fostered by the Business and Professional Women's club and many of their members participated in the work, which was varied according to the demand. The course is open to all women who are interested in this line of exercise and indications are
that there will be a larger class this year than last, for the course was not offered until after school start-

SCHOOL CONGESTION IS STILL PACKING CHILDREN INTO CRAMPED QUARTERS

Building Program Must Be Pushed to Meet Growth
of Enrollment Throughout the City, It Is Indicated by Conditions

TRANSFER OF PUPILS IS UNDERWAY NOW
Wilson Avenue Intermediate Necessitates Re-occupation of Abandoned Hall Room and Employment of Additional Teacher

Superintendent Richardson D. White is having his own troubles trying to take care of superfluous students in the congested schools and it is clear from the acute stage
they have reached in some of the schools that the building program of the city schools will have to go on.

At Acacia, for example, all grades have over 50 pupils
except the first and the sixth, and the first is climbing, having 48 enrolled Wednesday.

At Pacific it is even worse. There are 47 in the third grade, 56 in the fourth, 63 in the fifth and 49 in the sixth,
an impossible situation which it is going to be very difficult to handle. An effort has been made to transfer some of the pupils to Colorado, but that school is filling up rapidly.

At Columbus Avenue school, B-1,
B-6 and the third, fourth and fifth grades all have over 50 pupils.

The new division line between the two intermediates is working out fairly well but the Wilson Avenue school is so crowded that it has been compelled to return to the use of the little room at the end of the hall on the second floor,
which had been abandoned with impressive ceremonies in the expectation it would not have to be used again.

Another change has had to be made in the district line between Cerritos and Acacia to relieve the last named school in the third,
fourth and fifth grades. The district line did run south on Central to Magnolia, then east to the city limits, taking in both sides of Cypress.

The changed line stops on Central at the north side of Palmer
road, then east to both sides of Palmer, then east to Glendale avenue and south as before. This change cuts out from Acacia all of the district, and all south of Palmer and the cross streets affected. Beyond Central it takes in all of Virginia place, part of Acacia, Florence place, and the north side of Park avenue. All that territory was transferred to Cerritos, which is not crowded.

Some of the people whose children have been excluded from Cerritos, have petitioned for transferred to Colorado and these petitions will be granted until the rooms in Colorado are full.

To care for the overflow in several subjects at Wilson Avenue Intermediate, it has been necessary
to employ an additional teacher,
viz., Mrs. Birden E. Anderson of 339 North Rampart, Los Angeles,
who has been in California about three years. Her last teaching experience was in a Chicago high school.

The program has been completed at the Wilson Avenue Intermediate and work is proceeding
regularly. At the Glendale Avenue Intermediate it is just about finished and classes were expected to be following the permanent schedule today.

Another enrollment will be taken at the end of the week. The first day enrollment as segregated by schools totalled 3476, distributed
as follows:
Wilson Avenue, 524; Glendale
Avenue, 197; Columbus, 471;
Broadway, 333; Central Avenue,
255; Pacific, 37; Colorado, 207;
Cerritos, 179; Doran, 201; Acacia,
311; Grandview, 96; Magnolia, 30,
making a grade school total of 3, 181.

Kindergarten enrollment stood:
Columbus, 70; Broadway, 29; Central, 37; Pacific, 45; Colorado, 25;
Cerritos, 29; Doran, 21; Acacia,
31, making kindergarten total of 295, or a total for all schools of 3476.

Mr. White will visit Pacific Avenue today to see what can be done
there. So far he has no tentative solution to offer.

TEAM DISAPPEARS

A team—one horse and one mule
—belonging to J. Kempton of Tu-junga, disappeared yesterday in company with a man who gave his name as Ross. It seems that Ross was driving the team for Kempton.
Yesterday morning he went to work as usual and has not been heard of since. The local police are investigating.

ed last season, but will be included
from the beginning this year.
Spanish is another of the courses
that were not offered until after the school was under way, but even then they proved to be very popular
and will be offered under the direction of Mr. Brockway again this year. Last year it was necessary to have the advanced class meet at an earlier hour than other classes
in order to accommodate Mr. Brockway, who had charge of the class,
but this year conditions have adjusted themselves so that the work
can come at the regular time.

A complete announcement of the courses and the time and meeting
place of the classes as well as the method of registration will be made in the local evening papers on Saturday of this week. Watch for the announcement and follow closely
the plan laid out for enrollment.

MISS MEER'S HAT STOLEN

Mrs. Ralph Meeker of East Colorado street, reported to the Glendale police yesterday that someone stole the hat of her daughter, Mildred, from a locker in the Glendale
high school. The police force has been detailed to locate the hat.

Ship Trombonists Hold Keen Contest for Championship of North Atlantic

Contest for Trombone Championship

New York. An endurance test for the trombone playing championship of the North Atlantic has just concluded and the title has passed to the challenger despite claims of foul made by the loser. The umpire of the unique event will have difficulty with his retaining his reason, although he admits that the ordeal was one that had him on the verge of a brain-storm.

Harry Brown, trombone player in the band of the Steamship President Fillmore of the United States Lines, is no longer long distant horn tooter of the North Atlantic. Wearing the laurels of victory today is Carl Jacob, trombonist extraordinary in the band of the Steamship George Washington.

He is not champion because of greater lung power, nor because of better lip control, but rather because of an unexpected calamity that put the former champion hors de combat. But being a good sport, as well as an excellent trombonist, the new champion declares he will shortly give his dethroned adversary another try for the title.

Brown came into the trombone playing title after a series of elimination contests and won his crown after a decisive victory in Bremerhaven, Germany, when the top-notch performer of another steamship line went down before his glorious blasts. Then came the challenge from Jacob of the Steamship George Washington.

The battle was started on the deck of the Steamship President Fillmore. According to the rules of the contest the men were to play continuously for two hours and if neither gave up tooting before that time the championship was to be decided on points. W. T. Robertson, port steward of the United States Lines, was chosen as umpire. Each player decided as to his musical selections, the agreement being that neither would repeat the same piece during the two hours of the contest.

At a signal from the umpire the contest was on and the terrific rumptus that followed caused many of the spectators to hold their ears. At the end of the first hour the result seemed about even and then both of the trombonists redoubled their efforts.

About ten minutes of playing was left when an awful thing happened. The champion happened to look under a life-boiler and was greeted by a sight that caused cold perspiration to break out upon him. Under the boat was a grinning steward lustily sucking upon a lemon. Try as he might to avoid the sight Brown's eyes could not resist the lemon-sucker.

Sour notes began to issue from the trombone of Brown. His mouth began to pucker and his eyes seemed to pop from his head. Instead of music there came forth from his instrument a weird, prolonged moan as though from a great beast in mortal agony. The moan diminished, droned down and ceased. The champion could not blow a note. The contest was over and Jacob was declared winner. He had not seen the lemon-sucker and continued to play for the full two hours.

FIREWORKS TO MARK RANDALL CAMPAIGN

Fireworks are planned for the Ninth Congressional District Campaign. Charles H. Randall has addressed a letter to Congressman Lineberger suggesting they meet on the platform in every town in the district to jointly discuss the issues.

Mr. Randall's letter follows, and an early acceptance is expected from Mr. Lineberger:

My dear Mr. Lineberger: The canvass of the primary election discloses that your total vote was about 23,000 and my total was 26,000.

When the fact is considered that 200,000 or more voters were registered in the Ninth District, while only 55,000 indicated their intentions at the primary, it is apparent that the 150,000 absentees will have a very large voice on November 7th in the choice of Congressman in our District.

In order that these voters who have yet to make up their minds shall have the fullest opportunity to hear and interrogate the candidates, I invite you to appear jointly with me in public discussion of the issues of the day, in as many places in the District as may be convenient to you.

I shall hope to have a very early reply to this letter, so that all the arrangements may be made promptly.

Very cordially,

CHARLES H. RANDALL.

Willie was always on the lookout for something good to eat and did his best to coax money out of his relatives.

When Uncle William, who was a hard man of business, visited his nephew, Willie asked him for a nickel to buy an orange from the man outside.

"Give you a nickel? Certainly not!" said the uncle. "You'll never make a business man. Run out and make faces at him and perhaps he'll throw one at you."

EDMONDS WELCOME HOME AT RECORD PRAYER MEETING

Dr. J. K. Kilkerson and Committee Receive Pastor and Wife

REV. W. E. EDMONDS.

One of the largest prayer meetings that has been held for a number of years, met at the Presbyterian church last night.

At the close of the meeting, Dr. J. K. Kilkerson, chairman of the reception committee of the church took charge of a reception for Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Edmonds who have just returned from San Francisco where they spent a month.

Mrs. Edmonds was brought forward and Dr. Kilkerson welcomed both she and Rev. Edmonds in the name of the church and made a very fine talk. Talks of welcome were given by Mrs. James A. Newton in behalf of the women of the church; Miss Mildred Elliott in behalf of the young people of the church; Miss Helen McCormick in behalf of the Juniors; W. A. Horn in behalf of the men of the church.

Following this, Miss Elizabeth Mottern and Mr. Hartman sang a beautiful duet. A solo was also rendered by Henry Cantor.

This completed the program and everyone came forward and gave them the glad hand, refreshments were served, with Mrs. J. E. Colvin in charge.

MRS. MOORE WINS APPEAL FROM LOWE FINE

Judge Russell Avery, Wednesday, in the superior court, reversed the action of the jury in Judge Lowe's court, and cancelled the fine imposed upon Mrs. Cecilia Moore building a house at 1915 Vassar street, Glendale, for alleged irregularity in construction, in the alleged placing a window in the house too close to the line of the property. It was alleged she violated the state law in not having adequate window service.

HOLY FAMILY CATHOLIC CHURCH TO BE DEDICATED ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Scene of Big Gathering of Representative Civic Authorities, Catholic, Men, Women, Societies and Orders on September 23

As there seems to be some misunderstanding regarding the arrangements for the banquet to be held in honor of the bishop on his visit next Sunday, to the city of Glendale, the Rev. James S. O'Neill, pastor, makes the following announcement:

"The heads of all civic, religious and fraternal organizations of Glendale have received invitations to both the church dedication and the banquet, and it must be distinctly understood that they are the guests of the Holy Family parish and no charge of any kind will be made for the banquet or anything else on this occasion.

"Visiting guests are requested to present their invitations both at the church for admission to the dedication services and at the door of the chamber of commerce auditorium for the banquet, as ample provisions for comfortably seating the guests has been made in the church as well as in the banquet hall. The dinner will be served by the Glen Inn.

After all guests are provided for there will be a limited number of seats for the banquet which will be distributed among the parish organization and sold to those members of the Holy Family church, who wish to attend.

"The program is one of rare excellence, including orchestral numbers by William A. Bodie, saxophone and director; Jules Bellich, violin; Mr. Louis Apid, cello; Mr. Alias L. Gardner, string bass, and our own Herbert A. Henning, at the piano.

"They will be assisted by the following: Mr. Wilbur Herwig, tenor, a new arrival in Glendale, who makes a valuable acquisition to the musical ranks of our city. Mr. Herwig has been tenor soloist for 12 years at the Cathedral in Philadelphia, Pa., and is destined to fill a long-felt want in our musical circle, as he possesses a luscious tenor voice of grand opera range and a world of musicianship to back it up. In addition to the above, Mr. Edward J. Whelan, the organist and choir director of St. Basil's church, Los Angeles, and head of musical department of St. John's academy, Los Angeles, has full charge of the music for the dedication services.

Mr. Whelan will be assisted by his choir of thirty voices and will personally preside at the organ and as the regular organist of the Holy Family church. Mr. Harry Girard is still incarcerated in the plaster cast made necessary by his unfortunate accident on July 1, when he fractured his right hip.

ARTS AND CRAFTS CROWD PENDROY'S

The third floor of Pendroy's Dry Goods company was fairly crowded today when the Arts and Crafts section of the Tuesday Afternoon club met there.

Mrs. Fred Deal is curator of this section and there were 30 ladies present. The making of French flowers from velvet, ribbon and silk was taken up under the personal direction of Miss Belle McGaugh. Miss McGaugh is a teacher of wide experience, having classes at the Polytechnic night school in Los Angeles and afternoon work at the Grand Avenue school. She also was formerly a teacher at Bullock's.

This section meets the first and third Tuesdays of the month in the art department at Pendroy's and it is probable that at their next meeting they will take up composition flower work. If the instructor can be obtained. The ladies meet from 10 until 2, not taking time for lunch.

SMITH PUTS JAZZ INTO CAR SALES PARADE

When it comes to novelty George T. Smith, local agent for the Overland and Willys-Knight cars, is "there."

He put on one of his novel stunts there. It consisted of an automobile parade Wednesday in which a banner bearing the new price was attached to each car. There were ten cars in the parade, exclusive of the service truck, which took the lead, and on which was one of Glendale's leading jazz orchestra. The parade started from Mr. Smith's headquarters at 228 South Grand boulevard. It journeyed through Glendale, then over to and through Eagle Rock, then back through Glendale to Burbank. It ended its operations for the day by making a tour of Glendale, finally landing back at headquarters. The piano used to furnish the music came from the Schuck Music company, 211 North Brand.

The ten cars in the parade were just received by Mr. Smith. Lots of them were sold and in these cases deliveries have, it is understood, already been made.

H. H. READ IS ENLARGING HIS FACTORY

H. H. Read, 219 South Glendale avenue, will be compelled to increase his floor space and factory facilities for furniture and upholstery and refashioning to take care of his growing business. Starting with a small shop, Mr. Read has built up an upholstery business that brings people from not only Glendale and vicinity, but many nearby towns, who have found out that his work is A-1 in every respect.

Mr. Read had unbounded faith in Glendale when he purchased two lots on Glendale avenue, and he believes that this part of the city will grow very rapidly when the new hotel and electric line are assured. Carrying a very large stock of upholstery cloth, etc., Mr. Read is prepared to take care of any kind of work offered and numbers among his patrons the best people of Glendale and vicinity. He makes mattresses, any size or kind, does all kinds of upholstery and repainting of furniture. Mr. Read is fitting up his show rooms in a manner that will enable him to give his patrons an idea of the kind of work he does, putting in the panel effect and displaying the different grades and colors of material used.

'HUMMING BIRD' AT THE EGAN

Maudie Fulton continues at the Egan theatre, Los Angeles, in her highly successful play, "The Humming Bird," which enters upon its 14th week of uninterrupted prosperity on next Monday evening. Seldom in the annals of Los Angeles theatricals has a play received such unqualified endorsements as has this delightfully different surprise play.

Miss Fulton, who appears in the double role of author and star, has conceived a drama of regeneration of the French Apache, through the united influence of patriotism and a rather deftly conceived love affair. She has inculcated many whimsically humorous lines which serve to make the entire three acts highly enjoyable throughout.

For the central figure, Tonnette, a girl of Montmartre, Miss Fulton has incorporated the same elfin charm which made her "The Brat," so seductive a figure before the footlights and later on the silver sheet. The part is a winsome characterization of appealing possibilities.

The well-known perfect cast supplied by Oliver Morosco and Frank Egan includes Robert Ober, Wilfred Lucas, Jack Gardner, Grace Travers, Florence Oberle, Walter Willis, William T. Rogers, Mia Marvin, and others.

The engagement is limited, as Miss Fulton in "The Humming Bird" are due on Broadway in November. Mail orders for seats will receive due attention if addressed to the Egan Theatre box office.

EXCHANGE CLUB NEW BOOKS IN LIBRARY ARE ANNOUNCED

More new books at the Glendale city library on Harvard! All are in the attractive dress of the new book and all catalogued and ready for circulation. There is fiction, of course, but there is also more substantial reading, for example—two books analyzing the causes and results of the world war that are creating a great deal of discussion. They are "Now It Can Be Told" by Philip Bibbs, and "Shall It Be Again?" by Edward Turner. These are commended to thoughtful readers by the librarian, Mrs. Alma Danford.

The additions in fiction include the last book by Hutchinson, who wrote "If Winter Comes." It is entitled "This Freedom," and is the subject of much comment, favorable and otherwise.

"The Shorn Lamb" by Emma Speed Sampson, is described as an altogether delightful story.

The new book by Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street," is also on the shelves. The last creation is entitled "Babbette." To determine whether it is as good as "Main Street" readers will have to pool their opinions. It is interesting to know that Mr. Lewis is the descendant of a family that traces its ancestry on this side of the water for 300 years, and is distributed over New York and Connecticut. He was born, however, in a small Minnesota town, hence the microscopic photograph of "Main Street."

He was graduated from Yale, entered the newspaper game and was for some time editor of the Associated Press in San Francisco, and later held a position on the staff of a New York magazine.

A good story of the northwest will be found in "Northwest" by Harold Bindloss.

"Judith of Geddes Valley" by Honore Willis, is recommended as a good book by Mrs. Danford.

"Lovers of Booth Tarkington" will be glad to know that his last book "Gentle Julia" is available.

"Flowing Gold" is the picturesque title of a stirring story, the scene of which is laid in oil districts of Texas.

"Homeland" by Margaret Hill McCarter is all that its name suggests and a very pretty tale.

Joseph Vance's "Masquerader" for which patrons of the library have been watching, is now to be had. It is well worth the reading by the many who enjoy his books.

"The Wrong Mr. Wright" by Bertha Ruck is an intriguing story which will pleasantly while away a leisure hour.

"The Madonna of the Hills" by Arthur Guy Empey has won much favorable comment.

Another western story which is certain to please is "Purple Springs," by M. C. Clung.

Those who failed to read "Meriton of the Movies" in serial should not fail to get the book. It is one of the best things that Harry Leon Wilson has done, and one of the most illuminating expositions of life in a moving picture studio.

"Poor Richard" is an excellent story of Franklin, written by Irving Bacheller.

At its meeting today the Realty Board of Glendale unanimously voted in favor of the purchase of an additional thirteen acres to the city park on Patterson avenue. It was decided to suggest to the city council that action along this line be taken. It was the general consensus of opinion that the city dads would be very unwise to turn down a proposition of this kind.

A communication was received from the Realty Board of San Diego, which asked that a certain resolution which would tend to place the real estate profession on a higher plane be adopted. After some discussion it was decided to take no action in this matter until the operations of the State Realty organization has been ascertained.

The board endorsed the act of the Federal Improvement association with regard to asking the city council to take up with the Los Angeles city council the matter of the city of Glendale connecting with the outfall sewer system, which is proposed under Los Angeles city and the Regional Planning Congress outline.

W. A. Hart and Roy D. King were appointed on the newspaper committee, while A. M. Yale, Mr. Sawyer and James Pearson were selected to serve on the speakers' committee.

Truths in Epigram

We pardon in the degree that we love.—Rochefoucauld (1613-1680).

Many go out for wool and come home shorn themselves.—Cervantes (1547-1616).

The less men think, the more they talk.—Montesquieu.

OUTWITTING NATURE

Think of science in direct combat with the forces of the sun! The sun being the source of energy, and energy being about all there is, the luminary is entitled to respect amounting to deference. The sun is not perfect. It has facial blemishes known as sun spots. These are believed to have a distinct influence. It is impossible to change the complexion of the sun, but it is possible to lessen the influence of the spots. This is what the scientist is striving to accomplish.

The sun spots are believed to shower the earth with more electricity than mundane requirements demand. The excess leads to confusion. It interferes with every phase of electric service. It paralyzes the telegraph and telephone. It causes fires, burns out fuses, short circuits the whole business, and makes repair men work overtime. So the government observatory has undertaken to report sun spots just as the meteorological bureau sends out warning of the itinerary of storms, and tells the farmer to make ready. When a spot appears at the lunar rim, and starts to travel across, the concerns merchandizing in electric current will make preparations to meet the conditions certain to arise. Just what measure will be taken remains the secret of the cunning craftsman, but doubtless he will find a way to escape disaster owing to an over-supply of current.

Sun spots are said to occur in cycles of eleven years, and the present to be about midway between manifestations. In this case there will be plenty of time to get ready for whatever the spots project earthward next time. Perhaps the extra current may be stored and made to work when needed.

TRUSTING AMERICA

In his Sunday sermon a minister remarked that America had reason to trust America more than all the nations. This doubtless is the case. It has looked to the people of this country for aid and has been abundantly answered. Money and material have been sent in great volume in the attempt to do something to save a people that, except for such intervention, seemed to be doomed. This charity has been on the part of private citizens or groups of citizens. Whether it is possible by continuing it, to benefit the survivors of more recent atrocities, is a question.

The powers are taking a singular view of the Turks. France for example, indicates that it intends to do nothing until Kemal, their leader, has been guilty of an overt act. What is an overt act? The path of Kemal has been marked by blazing villages, by slaughter, looting and rapine. The triumphant forces, drunk on the blood of the innocent, are moving towards the neutral zone with apparent intent to attack. If there is no overt act to be discerned in this, France must be awaiting some conduct marked by stupendous frightfulness quite incomprehensible in advance. Italy holds a similar view apparently. Only England shows a tendency to take arms and beat back the horrid invasion.

So far as the United States is concerned, it is helpless. In refusing to enter the League of Nations it declared officially that the conduct of Europe was none of its affair. An admonition from this government would be as futile as a finger raised to dissuade a mad bull charging a red banner. Regret may be expressed, and probably will be, over the conditions that prevail, but to the forces responsible for the conditions, this will not be a matter either of importance or interest.

PITIFUL TRAGEDY

The tragedy at Jackson proved to be complete. Not a man of the forty-seven shut into the mine escaped. After the first few days there was no recognizable chance of escape. As the days dragged into weeks, the pretense of the expressed hopefulness was apparent. Had the atmospheric conditions been favorable, the men could not have survived weeks of starvation. The suggested possibility was unthinkable. There is a grain of comfort now in the knowledge that the men died quickly, and that to the last they had departed themselves not only as men, but as heroes. No panic of despair overtook them. They could not have been fully aware of the desperateness of the situation, and buoyed by the thought of release, they sought to prolong life until rescue should come. Their efforts vain, the clutch of death at their throats, they laid down, and calmly passed away. In the last moments they had not forgotten ties of affection. Father and son lay side by side; brother was comrade to brother in the darkness and silence. While there had been frantic efforts to reach them, for them the final peace had come.

That precautions might have been taken that would have prevented the disaster is not a thing lightly to be said. Naturally there will be a rigid investigation. Even if there is no blame to be fixed, there must, in this dreadful sacrifice of human life, have been a lesson that will be heeded. The devotion and bravery of the rescue parties was a fine exhibition of courage and endurance. To know that such material is available in every crisis, thrills the pride. And yet how infinitely better to avoid the crisis.

EUROPE'S WAR SPIRIT

Before the world war astute writers had formulated the theory that there could be no more armed conflict. They demonstrated that it had become economically impossible. They set forth that the agencies of destruction had become so terrible that no nation would think of war. Immediately following this, the world burst into a hateful flame bent upon the destruction of life and the imperilling of civilization. It was fighting, it declared between volleys, a war against war. Victory meant permanent peace. Just like that.

The great war has been over a few years. In this interval a surprising number of the powers have seemed to be poised for new onslaught. The great expense of it, as of some lesser countries, is to keep its military establishment in fighting trim. Just now Turkey, that was on the losing side, is causing so much disturbance that the allies may have to unite against its encroachments. Either they will unite or Turkey will have its way, and the already threatened friendship between England and France perhaps be fatally jeopardized.

Of course all this concerns the people of the United States very closely. They raised an army that peace might everywhere prevail. They beheld the peace still a dream. This in itself is a perturbing spectacle. Americans are interested in a financial way. Europe owes them vast sums of money. Concerning the time and method of paying this there is some doubt. Suggestion has even been made that the debt be effaced as an act of amity. In the circumstances, to do so would be merely to support European armies. Americans could not be expected to do this. Such a course would be contrary to their own principles as made plain by their advocacy of disarmament. Europe would be doing better for itself were it to curb its war spirit, and get back at work long neglected.

Thousands of Arizona people have signed a petition asking that $5000 be appropriated by the state for the support of the family of a motorcycle policeman killed in discharge of his official duty. While this shows that their hearts are in the right place, it is likely to run foul of constitutional limitations. If every signer of the petition were to chip in four-bits, the situation would be fully met.

Government By Special Interests

By DR. FRANK CRANE

One of the dangers of democracy is government by special interests.

Like all living things, democracy fares forward on its dim and perilous way, menaced by infinite dangers. The continuous miracle is the persistence of life. There are a thousand reasons why everything that is alive should have died long ago.

Doubtless democracy will win past every peril eventually, but that should not make us shut our eyes to the things that threaten. And one of the chief minatory elements in the situation is the influence exerted upon government by compact minorities.

That is the dark feature of the tariff bill. Most citizens of the United States are in favor of some sort of tariff. But it is the way the tariff was made that is alarming.

When the tariff on wool is advocated by men who are themselves owners of great flocks, and the tariff on sugar by those heavily interested in beet sugar, and so on, we see a government moulded not for the public good but for private advantage. The bonus may or may not be a good thing, but what is a bad thing is to see the men that will directly profit from the bonus organizing together to cajole and threaten congress.

In the government's relation toward industry, one special group interested in capital and investments maintains a vigorous lobby, and another special group composed of labor leaders is liberal in threatening gestures.

And then we have an incipient effort to solidify the woman vote, the wet vote, the negro vote, the German vote, and probably in time we shall have the red-haired vote and the hunch-back vote.

Government by party lends itself easily to the power exerted by these special groups. A party is essentially an organization whose end and aim is to get office. Its most and drink are spoils. Men who are elected consider themselves to be under obligations to their party first, and to the nation after.

The pity of all this is that it is characteristically American. We take it all as a matter of course, and we pooh-pooh and pish-trush any one that suggests that we can run a government on any other principle but that of graft.

In the new course of study for evening elementary schools we notice in the syllabus of history a subject entitled "The American Party System of Government."

Our constitution does not provide for a party system of government, and never contemplated any such system. A democrat or a republican has no place in the halls of congress, which is supposed to be for the representatives of the people.

We have only to carry the party politics and private interests ideas a little further and we will get into the condition of those South American republics which are frankly controlled by political cliques whose openly declared purpose is plunder.

QUERIES

(Find the error in this article)

The First Article

"A Constant Reader": "Kindly let me know on what date 'The Right Word' column was started. I should like to obtain back copies from the beginning to July 28, inclusive. Owing to the interest I take in the column I have become a reader of your paper." Answer: The column first appeared in The New York Globe on Tuesday, February 14, 1922. It began in other papers throughout the country on various dates beginning April 10, 1922. If you will write the Circulation Department of your paper I am sure you will be accommodated.

"Sugared" and "Watered"

W. D. Pauk: "Will you kindly inform me through your column if it is permissible to say 'I have sugared the berries, and I have watered the lawn.' Can these two nouns be used as past participles in this way? Answer: You used the words correctly. They are not nouns as you have used them.

"Elopse" vs. "Lapse"

Mildred Karp: "The writer will thank you to kindly certify (a split infinitive) the correctness of the following sentence: 'After an elopse of three years he returned home.' If it is incorrect, kindly state reasons." Answer: Elopse is a verb. The right word is lapse.

Yesterday's Error

"Whereas the word 'dove' is a slang colloquialism which is not recognized by correct lexicographers and may not be in some dictionaries at all."

The foregoing group of words are not a sentence. Whereas is a conjunction, but there is no clause to which it can join the clause that follows it. Whereas should have been omitted.

THE LISTENING POST

Life might be compared with the loaf. If it were all flour without yeast it would be heavy and soggy. And if it were all yeast without flour it would be light and airy. But without much nourishment.

There is a wide distinction between sentiment and sentimentality. One is a real and the other is a practiced emotion.

One brings help to the needy and the other brings only mush to the mouth—the mush of mere words.

So the loaf needs to have nourishment. It needs to have a practical basis. And then it needs yeast to leaven it.

Just as life needs to be builded on a practical basis.

A lot of people dancing and mumbling about beauty and art and sentimentality would be very hungry if the farmers of us did not get on their jumpers and go out into the field.

The house would be rather stale, flat and unprofitable without a gas stove, a bath and light and heat.

If a man established a bank and lent money to whoever might be in need, he would be full of sentimentality but his bank would not last long.

Because it would have no practical basis. And the depositors would be the first to disestablish the bank.

By the withdrawal of their money.

For there is very little sentiment about our savings and their husbanding.

We want to be sure they are safe. It may be a narrow view of life, but it is the human nature of us. And all of us have the same human nature.

But if the banker established the bank with the flour of good sense and care, and the leaven of a broad and deep humanity, he would be providing a loaf that serves the community well.

Neither flour nor leaven alone is enough. They must be mixed in the right proportion.

The difficulty with a great many reformers is that they have no sense of practical values. They run off to the extreme of a mushy sentimentality.

Instead of standing fairly between a blind radicalism and a timid conservatism.

The eminent physician who gave his services for nothing to anyone who might need them would soon have no services worth giving.

Because he would not survive in a world of every day.

And yet the eminent physician cannot afford to take pay for all his services. He needs to give away much of service.

That his spirit may be leavened with humanity.

The grocer who gave away groceries to whoever might need them would soon have nothing left to give away.

His stock of goods and credit would be exhausted.

And so we might run the whole scale of human activities to discover how much we need flour as well as leaven.

No man and no society can be all flour or all yeast. All sentimentality and no practical sense. Or all hard headedness and no softheartedness.

We need a mixture in the right proportion of sentiment and hard sense.

So we need to harness Pegasus sometimes to a plow and make him work.

For life and the loaf are not by flour alone. But by flour and yeast and salt.

JAMES W. FOLEY.

SONGS OF THE POETS

Absence—By Richard Jago (1715-1781)

With leaden foot Time creeps along
While Delia is away:
With her, nor plaintive was the song,
Nor tedious was the day.

Ah, envious Pow'r, reverse my doom:
Now doubly thy career,
Strain ev'ry nerve, stretch ev'ry plume,
And rest them when she's here.

Prehistoric Observatory Unearthed by Archeologist

A seat of science among prehistoric Americans has been discovered. Dr. J. Walter Fewkes, chief of the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution, after three months of archeological field work at Mesa Verde National Park, Colorado, reports the finding of an astronomical observatory used by the ancient cliff dwellers in calculating time for their farming operations.

A round tower, 15 feet in diameter and 10 feet high, was probably used for observations of the sun on the horizon at sunrise and sunset, and the information gained was used in determining the time for planting and performing other agricultural operations. In front of "Far View Tower," as this observatory has been named, there are the ruins of three underground rooms that Dr. Fewkes believes were used for the worship of the sun and other sky gods.

A large mound was also opened and investigated by the expedition. When work began no walls were visible. The site was covered with fallen stones and earth capped by sage brush. Identical with other elevations found in the immediate vicinity. The removal of vegetation and debris, and an excavation of the rooms revealed a rectangular building 70 feet square with walls averaging one story high. It had indications of a lofty tower in the middle of the western side, which must have imparted to the building somewhat the appearance of a church steeple, or minaret of a mosque. The large room was subterranean, situated in the center of the ruin, its floor being about 25 feet below that of the other rooms. This subterranean room is a kiva but differs from others of like type on the park in that it has no fireplace in the center of the floor, nor ventilator or deflector, and has eight mural pilasters instead of six to support its roof.

The fallen walls within showed indications of a great fire, the stones and adobe being turned brick color and the walls bright red by the great heat. On the floor of the kiva 25 feet deep was an enclosure set off by a semicircular wall where the action of fire was particularly evident. In the enclosure was found many votive offerings, the most numerous of which were a dozen clay tobacco pipes of various shapes and sizes, one or two decorated on their exteriors. These pipes, which are the first ever found on the Mesa Verde, had evidently been smoked by the priests and then thrown into the shrine.

With the pipes the shrine also contained several fine stone knives, small decorated clay plaques, various fetiches and other objects. Pine Shrine House was entered on the south by two doorways midway between which a large pictograph of a coiled serpent was incised on a large stone set in the wall.

To the south of the building there was a plaza surrounded by a retaining wall and directly opposite one of the entrances there are aboriginal steps which lead to a rectangular shrine four feet in size, in which were found a number of water-worn stones and a meteorite surrounding a large stone image of the mountain lion. The contents of this shrine were replaced by the mountain lion left in his original position and the enclosure covered with a netting to prevent the possible removing of the objects from their places. Other shrines and several stone idols of size were found in the neighborhood. The idols found at Pine Shrine House represent the snake, mountain lion, mountain sheep and bird, an important discovery as previously only one stone animal had been found at the Mesa Verde Park.

Dr. Fewkes declares that one of the most instructive experiences of the archeologist is to see a skeleton centuries old as it lies in the grave. One of the ancient people of Pine Shrine house was left in a prepared chamber for tourists to inspect. The cemetery lies on the southeast corner of this ruin and in it were found several human burials from one of which a good skeleton was chosen to illustrate the manner of burial and the mortuary offerings. This skeleton was not removed from the grave but was surrounded by a stone wall, forming a room rectangular in shape protected by a grating and a waterproof roof. Visitors may now see one of the skeletons of the race of cliff dwellers as he was placed in his grave more than 500 years ago. Not a single bone has been moved from position. This is the first time in North American archeology that an effort has been made to protect an Indian skeleton and leave it just as it laid for centuries.

A PROBLEM IN ETHICS

[New York Herald]

If you were flying over the ocean and your engine broke and dropped you into the water; and a long, low, rakish, bootlegging schooner came along and picked you up and went off with a sample from the cargo, and went close to home and friends; and, when the stern minions of the law came to you to demand a complete description of the long, low, rakish craft and its contraband cargo and the wicked crew—

What would you say?

DIG IN! DIG ON!

The country is looking forward to a demonstration, in the genuinely American spirit, of how fast coal can be mined in an emergency.

OBSERVED AT A GLANCE

It is queer that the camper so stupid as to set a forest fire, knows enough to get away from it.

Every burglar leaves clues but little else of value, and nobody seems to know what to do with the clues.

As an army must travel on its belly, as the saying is, the bolshevists as invaders would not break the speed limit.

Doubtless for a time the operation of deep mines will be conducted with commendable caution.

The best treatment for road hogs would be to round them up and put them in a pig-tight pen.

This season the world series is expected to open without any of the players trying to throw anything but the ball.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Kipling surely has kicked up a muss. It is an operation he generally enjoys, but this time it is doubtful if he is getting much pleasure out of it.

The hubbub arose over an interview he gave a correspondent. In his remarks he slammed the United States variously. When he observed the resentment his course had caused, he made a second mistake in denying the interview. Such denial is an ancient trick, and never works satisfactorily.

It is true that reporters, touching upon trivial subjects, have been known to put words into the mouth of another never uttered by that person. As a rule, however, this has been with the consent of the person in question, who had asked that views he had been known to entertain, be set forth in the reporter's own language.

On a publication of standing, a fake interview would be the reporter's quickest road to dismissal. It would not be tolerated by the editor. Countless interviews have been denied, the reporter having told the truth, and the other party having lied.

Every editor knows this and so does every reporter of experience. Kipling displeased his own countrymen by the interview. They say that the author is over-rated in this country, and that at home he cuts very little ice, so to speak. But this is not just either. Kipling has been a great writer, many of his poems virile, and permanent contributions to literature; many of his short stories well-nigh matchless. In this particular instance he got off on the wrong foot. Then he disputed the word of a reputable correspondent, and thought to get away with it.

Kipling belongs to the past as truly as though stamped "Victorian." There could have been no occasion for asking his opinion of anything new stirring the minds of men.

It is unpleasant to read that in Berlin people again are standing in long lines in front of food shops. That was a sight to which Germany was accustomed in war time.

While the war raged, and Germans believed it a righteous war, they bore the hardship with patience. They are less patient now. Prophecies of evil predict bread riots for the near future. But even in these dark days for Europe, the prophet sometimes is wrong.

A newspaper takes the trouble to record the fact that Mary Langdon Baker has again left Allister McCormick, this being a circumstance to be rated as unimportant if true. Mary long ago established the habit of leaving Allister at the church door or near it. Finding that this led to publicity, she has kept it up ever since, and the faithful scribes set down each fresh defection. Poor Allister. There may come a day when modest Mary will forget her usual stunt, and then he'll be out of luck.

From time to time there appear advertisement offering to put girls into the movies. There are countless girls who think life will be a failure unless they shall be put in the place indicated. Such girls are easy game.

Most of the advertisements are fraudulent. Sometimes the purpose is that of swindling the girls, and sometimes it is worse.

New York has been having a race riot of sufficient magnitude to cause the calling out of the police reserves. Clubs fall impartially on the heads of blacks and whites. Probably among the whites there were very few of American birth. As a rule these rows are made up on one side almost wholly of aliens who know nothing about America.

An American is on his way to Russia to organize the clothing industries of Petrograd and Moscow. Doubtless they need organization, and all things else essential to going concerns.

There cannot be any objection, unless it be based on sympathy, if an American workman seeks his fortune in Russia. For him to be able to introduce an area of order into that social chaos would be a triumph. Others have gone to Russia for the purpose of undertaking industrial pursuits, and have carried their capital with them. As a rule, they have been reported a little later as in earnest quest of enough to buy a one-way ticket to the United States.

A writer mentions Turkey's "victorious army of 300,000." Another writer who is in a position to know about the matter, says the army is 70,000, short of munitions, and forced to eat off the country. And as yet it is to be classed as "victorious" only by drawing on the imagination. Driving back the Greeks wasn't so much, and the slaughter of non-combatants was worse than nothing.

An engineer for the transportation committee of the Chicago city council says that the street car is to be displaced by the automobile. If he is correct, he is looking a long way ahead.

It is true enough that the automobile would like to have all the street space there is, but still there are a number of people who find the cars a convenience.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

We imported an orator for the last meeting of the Boosters' club. Just between us, he wasn't much of an orator, for his stuff ran too true to pattern. It was full of the same old copyrighted jazz stuff that most of the pep-injectors have used from the days of Samuel M. Smiles. But he put over one worth-while line from some poet who was given no credit:

"If you'd like to win, but you think you can't,

It's almost a cinch you won't—"

There was more of it, and it all rhymed prettily, but those were the two lines that stuck in my head. After all, the unidentified rhymist had it right. "Out in the world, you'll find, success begins with a fellow's will. It's all in the state of mind."

I looked around the table after the word-well got through spouting and sized up my fellow boosters. Half of them had been eminently successful in business, as eminent success is classified, a small town. Every one of them—every one of the men who have made good—were strong-hearted, courageous, sunny fellows who have believed in themselves and in their business and in their town. Sometimes I have thought they boasted a little too much. I do not want to trade my corner lot in our town for a location in Paradise, but that is mere conservatism. I suspect that Paradise is much to be preferred to our town. But you would never think of it when those lads get a-going.

"You're a set of husky devils," I said to one of them, "with maybe more red corpuscles or something than the rest of us have. That's why you won."

But he said I was wrong. Not one of the successes—we talked them over as we sat at table—had any qualities that the medium successes lacked. We were as alike in quality as so many potatoes from the same hill.

"Make yourself believe you can win," said he. "You can. It is surprising what tricks you can do with yourself if you try. Set your jaw and compel yourself to be sure of success. Not hopeful—to the dickens with hope. Not optimistic—that's a pale sort of hope. Be sure. And by and by you will be surprised to find that you are sure. It is no longer a false sureness. And you will be sure because your induced sureness has won success for you."

It's worth trying. I can do it a little even now.

CASTLES IN THE AIR

Nettie pressed her hand meaningly on her husband's arm as she saw him reach in his pocket.

"I wish," he reprimanded, as they waited for the elevator, "that you would not be so stingy and middle-class. Whenever you think I am going to tip any one you want to grasp the purse and choke it. I intended to give the check girl a quarter, but just to teach you a lesson in self-restraint gave her half a dollar."

"I saw it," said Nettie, half frightened by his angry tone. "I'm not stingy, Billy. It's only that we cannot afford such things."

"If we go, we are going right," replied Billy stubbornly.

"Then I'd rather not go," persisted Nettie, growing white under his angry stare. "We are middle-class people, and we cannot afford to spend so much for an evening's amusement. The price for the dinner was outrageous and—"

"Oh, I don't know," Billy's impetuous temper flared out as swiftly as it had blazed up, and he tucked Nettie's well-gloved hand under his arm. "We had a fine meal, and Brownson saw us there. We must have looked prosperous or the head waiter would never put us at the center table, near the orchestra. I tell you, it pays to be seen at the smart hotels. You can't tell when Brownson may let me in on some deal, and then—"

"He lifted his hat to an acquaintance—"

"we'll have our wonderful house—a big central hall, with a wide, curving stairway, with a statue of—"

"But, Billy," protested his wife, "even if we could buy a large place like that it would cost too much to keep up servants, and furniture, and high taxes, and all the demands that are made on a wealthy householder. I would like—"

Billy lifted his cane and hailed a passing taxi. "See, every time you nag about expenses I spend more money. I sure know how to spend money, and I'm proud to show my wife a good time," he said.

Nettie made no further remonstrance. She was afraid he would insist upon ending the evening at a theater if she did, and she breathed a sigh of relief when the taxi drew up in front of the handsome apartment building.

"Say, Nettie, have you two dollars with you? I seem to be out of money," whispered Billy in a chastened voice, after digging through his pockets.

Silently she produced two bills from her mesh purse, and saw him receive ten cents in change, which he handed the doorman as they entered. "I'll have to have that back," she said, when their own front door had closed upon them, "because it is for the cleaner, who will call tomorrow."

"Let's not worry about tomorrow," cried her husband, kissing her gayly. "We're only young once, hon. Let's not chafe at it."

Nettie looked at him and lifted her arms to remove her very smart hat, one that he had insisted upon her buying because it suited her delicate coloring so well. After all, it seemed useless to struggle against the silly waste of his simple salary. He never stinted her, never neglected her, as many men of his careless, spendthrift type would be apt to do, and she felt that her continual protests against spending a penny would eventually result in estrangement. And yet how she longed for a simple life in a house of their own, where they would be welding the present with the future in a safe union, to be building, instead of throwing away, the opportunities that might never visit them again. She disliked the garish life in the costly apartment house, where few of the wealthy tenants ever used their kitchenettes save for a morning cup of coffee or a bite of something late at night. The first part of every month Nettie and Billy lived lavishly, dining out and scattering tips prodigally. About the beginning of the third week, the supply nearly exhausted, they ate frugally at home, and the fourth week Nettie bought sparingly at the neighboring shops and charged the items until the first of the following month. The home meals were so plain and scanty that Billy unconsciously associated the very ordinary food with home, and as soon as his pockets were filled he insisted upon patronizing his favorite haunts. In vain Nettie tried to get him to eat at home the first of the month and see how good home food could be provided had she any latitude whatever in the purchasing of materials.

"No," he would laugh, "I didn't marry a cook. Doll up in your prettiest and we'll try that new cafe Jim told me about."

"Billy, I saw a bungalow today. It is five rooms, with a splendid bathroom, shower and everything up to date. Hot water heat—"

"And at the end of a carline with a vacant lot next door where most anything might be built. No, sir, when we buy right. I want a roomy lot, wooded. I want a high iron fence so that no one will run across our corner."

"Why, Billy, we could never buy a corner lot in the city," interrupted Nettie. "Out where Rose drove me the transportation was splendid and the lot was ridiculously cheap, a small payment down, and we could start right away. Your sal ary is so fine now that we ought to be saving part of it."

Billy, scarcely listening, nodded from around his paper as he noticed the cessation of her voice. Billy was so sweet tempered and generous, but he would not use his head.

At 2 o'clock Billy sat up in bed. His wife was breathing huskily and moaning. The doctor looked grave after his examination. "She will have to be taken to the hospital immediately. I'll call up an ambulance," he said.

"Just a little house, Billy, with roses and vines and a big yard. I don't want a grand place that we cannot enjoy. The castles you dream about are out of reach, but a tiny place that's really ours—"

"Her high, excited tones trailed away into moans."

"She sounds as though she has something on her mind." The doctor looked questioning at Billy.

"Most women wouldn't be content with the tiny cottage, with roses, that she is raving about. Nowadays, the wives want a palace instead of a home."

"My wife," said Billy proudly, but with a frightened catch in his throat as he stared down at the fever-flushed face with its too sharp contours, "is different from other women, and," he added as he heard the clang of the ambulance below, "she's going to have the little cottage she wants the minute she is able to go out and select it."

"Castles in the air," murmured the unconscious Nettie.

MINNESOTANS CALLED.

50,000 Minnesotans in our Southland are included in the call to the mammoth picnic reunion in Spremore Grove Park all day Saturday the 23rd. There will be ninety two county centers of interest and a brief snappy program with no long speeches. Every Gopher in Southern California should dig out and meet the other Gophers. Bring your basket dinners is the warning but hot coffee will be on tap all day.

All the jolly picnic features are assured and it will be a great day for Minnesotans.

NEW FEATURES

Intensive courses of four weeks each in horticulture and dairying, both running the first four weeks of the eight-week period, are features of the winter short course in agriculture at the State College of Washington, January 8 to March 3.

The two weeks' intensive course in farm gas engines will be repeated every fortnight, Jan. 8-20, Jan. 22-Feb. 3, Feb. 5-17, and Feb. 19-March 3. Similar dates are announced for the gas tractors course. An official and association cow-testers' course will be given March 5-17, when a creamery-men's course for those with six months' practical creamery experience is also to be given.

In the first half of the eight weeks' course in general farming all students are required to enroll for the work in soils, animal feeding, plant production, citizenship, and gymnasium work. The required subject in the second half of the term is farm management.

Courses which students may choose to combine with these are: live stock judging and management; dairy management and stock judging; dairy testing and records, pedigrees, and breeds; cereal and forage crops; soils management, drainage, and irrigation; fruit growing and varieties, storage, and orchard management; poultry production and management; accidents and diseases of farm animals; diseases of fruits and of field crops; economic insects; and farm marketing.

"No young man from the farm who has the time, whether he be farmer's son, manager, owner or renter, can afford to miss one or more of these courses," says Dean E. C. Johnson of the college.

"Those who are to succeed must first of all know how to produce at the lowest cost per bushel of grain, per box of apples, per crate of berries or truck, per dozen of eggs, per gallon of milk, and per pound of pork, beef, or mutton. This need is the greater when the margin between the cost of production and the price received is narrow.

"And they must know how to sell their products advantageously; high production without reasonable market prices leads only to failure. They must know how to manage the entire farm plant with a minimum of labor and a maximum of returns.

CHICKEN IN THE PAN

Sometimes I think the world is wrong; I look out here and there, And seem to see that there is woe and trouble everywhere; My spirits sink to depths of gloom; the clouds shut out the light, And how I strive to keep my cheer it's all a black as night. I sit and read of worlds gone mad, and rushing on to doom, And all the anxious soul of me is thickly wrapped in gloom, And as I sit in sorrow there the news of world: to scan, There drifts in on the air the smell of chicken in the pan!

The smell of chicken in the pan! In all the dreams of bliss the world has known from its first day was ever such as this? The butter and the sputter and the sizzle and the smell that has a gustatory joy beyond my words to tell. It drifts in through the kitchen door, and filters through the room, As rays of sunlight in the dark to drive away the gloom. A little while ago I was a melancholy man, But all is changed with that rich smell of chicken in the pan.

Yes, I am sorry for the world, and all its frets and woes, The sad old earth where this big wave of trouble overflows, I wish the wrong might be made right, in all this world of men And with our chastened hearts and kind we might begin again. But I just tell you what is true: a little while ago, The world seemed very dark and all my dreams were full of woe, And then that fragrance came to me and made another man, That drifting smell that came to me of chicken in the pan!

Hard and Soft F. B. Schedules

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Football schedules for the major eleven in 1922 are a mixture of some extremely hard going and some exceedingly soft sailing.

Yale, with the prospects of a very fine team, has arranged a very difficult schedule. If the Elis gets over the bumps ahead of them, Yale can come near claiming the national championship—this side of the Pacific coast.

On successive Saturdays from Sept. 23, the New Haven eleven will play Bates, Carnegie, North Carolina, Iowa, Williams, Army, Brown, Maryland, Princeton and Harvard.

That is some schedule!

In marked contrast to Yale, there is the case of Cornell, one of the best scoring teams of 1921, with the outlook for a great combination this fall.

Instead of giving the team a schedule that would allow it a real ranking after the season, the Cornell management arranged games that look like an obvious ambition for an undefeated season. Cornell plays St. Bonaventure, Niagara, New Hampshire State, Iowa Wesleyan, Columbia, Dartmouth, Albright and Pennsylvania. Dartmouth is the only hard spot on the schedule.

The "Big Three" has been accused in the past of falling for the lure of set-ups, but Yale, Harvard and Princeton drew some real opposition for 1922.

Yale's schedule has been mentioned and Harvard has only a slightly easier task against Middlebury, Holy Cross, Bowdoin, Centre College, Dartmouth, Florida, Princeton, Brown and Yale.

Princeton has breathing spells with some easy games scattered between contests with Virginia, Colgate, Chicago, Harvard and Yale.

Lafayette, Washington and Jefferson, Pittsburgh, Dartmouth and Syracuse have nothing to boast about and Pennsylvania has the Navy, Pittsburgh and Penn State as its hardest games.

The day is not far distant when a national championship may be awarded unofficially through a large number of important intersectional games. The list of east against west and south this fall is most imposing. Some of the major intersectional battles are North Carolina and Yale, Iowa and Yale, Centre and Harvard, Florida and Harvard, Virginia and Princeton, Chicago and Princeton, University of the South and Penn, Alabama and Penn, Wabash and Washington and Jefferson, Nebraska and Syracuse, McGill (Canada) and Syracuse, Kansas and Army, Georgia Tech and the Navy, St. Xavier's (Cincinnati) and the Navy, St. Louis and Notre Dame, Georgia Tech and Notre Dame and the Army and Notre Dame.

Iowa, champions of the Western Conference against Yale, and Chicago against Princeton will be two of the most interesting and most important games of the season.

FRANCE SAVES HER WARSHIPS

By WILFRID FLEISHER

United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, Sept. 20.—France will have no naval tonnage to destroy if the Washington naval treaty is ratified by parliament, her fleet as it stands coming within the prescribed limit of the Washington treaty.

The treaty allowed France to retain her fleet of 10 capital ships, which consists of three warships of the pre-dreadnaught type and seven dreadnaughts of the pre-Jutland type.

Naval officials point out that while the United States, Great Britain and Japan enlarged their navies during the war, France entirely interrupted her naval program voted in 1912 and which was then under construction in her dockyards, and devoted her entire efforts to making munitions and supplying the needs of her army.

THE GREAT PYRAMID OF GIZEH in Egypt was built about 2900 B. C. It covers 13 acres; contains 2,300,000 blocks of limestone, each weighing 2½ tons; pyramid at base 755 feet by 755 feet; almost 600 feet high originally.

'CLING TO SPEED OF OLD MAN' IS ADVICE

Judge Crawford Issues Warning to Alleged Speeder

"Cling to an old man's speed for awhile," was the advice given by Judge Crawford to Pete Colima of Van Nuys when the latter was arraigned in the Burbank recorder's court Tuesday afternoon on a charge of driving 42 miles an hour in the 30-mile zone on South Magnolia avenue.

Colima admitted that he was driving fast, stating that he was on his way to work at the Hollywood Country club and that he was late, but he said he did not realize he was going as fast as the officer said he was.

After the defendant stated that he was driving a Ford at the time he was arrested the judge produced laughter among the spectators in court by remarking, "you must have been pushing that car right along."

Colima was fined $20. The case against J. W. Gray was very similar to the one against Colima. Gray was charged with driving a Ford 39 miles an hour on South Magnolia avenue, in the 30-mile zone, to which he pleaded guilty. His fine was $15.

Owing to the radical conflict between the testimony offered by E. H. Christensen and Officer Olchvary, the case against the defendant was continued by Judge Crawford until 2 o'clock next Tuesday.

Mr. Christensen, who is charged with driving at the rate of 35 miles an hour on West San Fernando boulevard, claimed that the officer "got the wrong man."

The defendant was very insistent in his claim that the officer was mistaken, while the officer was just as positive that the defendant was mistaken.

Both sides say they will produce testimony to prove their claims when the case is heard next Tuesday afternoon.

Trying to reach San Pedro in time to be there on the arrival of the boat on which his brother-in-law was a passenger caused William L. Morris to get arrested on the charge of speeding, he testified.

Mr. Morris pleaded guilty to the charge of driving at the rate of 32 miles an hour on San Fernando boulevard, offering no explanation until Judge Crawford asked regarding the circumstances of the case. He was fined $10.

C. W. Faulkner, charged with driving at the rate of 37 miles an hour on San Fernando boulevard in front of the high school, which is in the 15-mile zone, was fined $15. He pleaded guilty to the charge, saying that he did not realize he was going that fast at the time.

A $15 fine also was assessed S. C. Freeman, who was charged with driving at the rate of 33 miles an hour in the 20-mile zone on Tenth street.

Charged with driving at the rate of 32 miles an hour in the 20-mile zone, J. J. Etter was fined $5.

Beautiful Forest Lawn

"Among the Hills"

There are but few burial parks—in the United States—if any—that have planned for a more extensive plan of improvements than has the management of Forest Lawn Memorial Park.

Its 250 acres—beautifully improved with a park-like system of landscape gardening and costly buildings. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent—and hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent to complete the various units now under construction.

Everything that art, science and loving care can devise has been planned for different forms of burial—be it earth burial, mausoleum crypt, cremation, columbarium niche or private vault.
